Role Description

Teaching English as a foreign language to a small group of foreign students.

We are not trying to be a school or English Language Camp. Our students come to us primarily for tennis. English lessons should be engaging and focused on developing the confidence of students. Our teachers should encourage the students to use the language skills they have learnt in their classrooms. Games, role play, debates, video and other such tools should be at the forefront of the lesson content and tennis should certainly be a key theme throughout the week!

JMT provides a programme guideline but you are responsible for creating your own lessons plans within this framework. You may be required to submit your weekly lesson plan to the camp manager in your weekly progress meeting.

Other key info:

- Classes are small (5-10 students)
- Students are mainly from Western Europe
- Students aged 8- 17 years old (Oxford)
- Every second Sunday teachers help out with the London visit.
